

Dirty Trick #1

Management Asks for a Second Chance

Management may ask you to give them another chance to solve your problems before voting for union representation.

You will hear how they did not know that you and your fellow workers were unsatisfied, they may terminate a supervisor or manager to show their concern, or they may merely begin to treat you better and to show more interest in you and your coworkers. They may even treat you to a pizza party or company-sponsored picnic!

The IBEW

TRUTH

Do not be fooled. These empty promises are no more than a ploy by the company to get you to vote no.

Without a contract outlining your wages, benefits, and working conditions, the company can make changes at will.

If you are still not convinced, ask the company to put their promises in writing in the form of a contract.
